Moore, Christopher Coyote Blue

Sam Hunter is the perfect insurance salesman: a chameleon who can size up the ideal pitch to close any deal or make any woman. Living on the beach in Santa Barbara California, Sam has all the trappings of a successful yuppie. His true identity - as Samson Hunts Alone, a full-blooded Crow Indian who fled his reservation and heritage at fifteen after killing a policeman - is hidden and almost forgotten. One day Coyote, the North American trickster figure, appears with the apparent intention of destroying Sam's life. This coincides with Sam's involvement with Calliope Kincaid, an uneducated single mother with a hippie lifestyle. When Calliope's ex-boyfriend kidnaps their baby, Coyote and Sam set off in pursuit. The farther Sam travels from his life in the city, the closer he comes to finding himself.

BIOGRAPHIES OF GREAT CANADIANS

Shardlow, Tom

 David Thompson: A Trail by Stars

David Thompson's Bicentennial will be celebrated in 2007. He arrived at the Churchill Factory trading post, aged 14, in 1784, straight from a charity school in London England.

He spent his life in the fur trade, first for the Hudson's Bay Company and later for the Northwest Company. His own words guide this version of his life story.

The colourful people and the complex events leading to and following a landmark judicial ruling are the substance here. In 1879 Standing Bear, chief of the peaceful Ponca tribe, was in court demanding the right that white Americans enjoyed - to be recognized legally as a human being.
